Return of the Titanic
(or, the S.S. Minnow Commemorative Raft Regatta)

Primary Benefit: Teambuilding

Secondary Benefits:
- Listening to everyone's ideas
- Role definition
- Leadership
- Big-picture thinking
- Resource utilization
- Communication skills

The Game: It's sink or swim time – will your team come out high and dry, or end up all wet?

Participants divide into small project teams. Each is charged with the challenge of building a raft from a limited supply of resources (a wild variety of colorful beach balls, balloons, tarps, rope, etc.) Your vessel must be capable of transporting several team members and your team flag. Navigate through an obstacle course to a dock or buoy on a lake, then (hopefully) all the way back to shore. There's a role for everyone - all members of your crew must coordinate efforts to brainstorm, create and build the raft (but not everyone needs to get on the raft).

Here’s your chance to be Huckleberry Finn, except that in our version everyone wears a lifejacket!

Program Length: Hopefully, somewhat less than a three-hour tour.

Space Requirements: A body of water.
